Marvel Strike Force is not the most F2P-friendly Gacha game out there, but it doesn't give players plenty of opportunities to grind for different types of currency. On the one hand, we can't help but sigh at the prospect of months and months running the same missions just to get enough heroes and upgrades to get us started. On the other hand, we are pleased that it is at least possible to compete in MSF, even if we are not prepared to spend any real currency. In addition, since we can play Marvel Strike Force on PC thanks to BlueStacks, we can always keep running missions while doing something else entirely. There are also a bunch of nifty features that this emulator provides to help you automate much of the grind and save more time for real fun. But we're doing a digression! Whether you are an F2P or P2W player, you should familiarize yourself with several types of currency in MSF, you should use them, and where you can get more. That's what we'd like to share below. Gold, Gold, Gold There is no resource more readily available in Marvel Strike Force than Gold. This is the soft game currency and can be used to pay for anything from hero levels to tool upgrades, as well as a number of items made available in the supply store. When you start playing, you'll get what looks like mountains of gold. Although gold will continue to pour into your chests through missions, achievements, and all sorts of battles you can think of, you will quickly realize that, overflowing as it may be, is still not enough for all your heroes. Prioritize your main team and always keep some gold in your reserves in case you need to upgrade a character quickly. Premium Power Cores There are mobile games out there that give players any kind of premium currency, unless they are willing to pay for it. Fortunately, this is not the case with Marvel Strike Force, although we will say, the amount you receive for free per day could use a little boost. However, it is possible to obtain a constant supply of power cores in MSF, both by connecting every day and completing daily missions, and through achievements. Needless to say, you shouldn't go about the generous throwing Power Cores left and right, although the game will tempt you to do so. Our recommendation is to use premium currency on the 3 energy refreshes you get per day. In general, this The highest value on Core as it allows you to farm specific heroes you might need during the beginning of the game. In addition, you can also use some Power Cores to refresh a campaign mission and get more photos to essential F2P characters, would be a third Villain for the Villains campaign, Iron Fist, or Jessica Jones. Jones. and energy rescroll credit What you can do in MSF will be mostly limited by energy supply. You need this resource to perform missions in both the Heroes and Villains campaign, which means that you absolutely need more than it to recruit new heroes and modernize existing ones. Play MARVEL Strike Force on BlueStacks Energy Reserves refill at a steady pace throughout the day. In addition, you can get a couple of energy increases during two specific time intervals during the morning and evening, respectively, depending on your location. Finally, you can fill your energy without power cores using the energy refill credit from your daily missions and achievements. Blitz and Arena Credits These two PvP game modes should be considered as the top priorities, both during the early- and late-play. The coins you get from emerging victorious from a Blitz Challenge or an Arena Battle can be used to purchase priceless supplies and unique heroes. Arena credits are awarded to you based on your ranking, as well as for completing two Arena battles per day. Meanwhile, Blitz Credits can be obtained from blitz battle, completing landmarks, and ticking the mission blitz daily. If after you run out of energy reserves you still have some time online, use it to accumulate these currencies. Blitz Charges unlocked quite early in the game compared to Raids and Arena, Blitz Challenges are actually very important for your progression. Unfortunately, it can be difficult to excel at blitz fights when you have nothing more than a few starter heroes to work with. Fortunately, you can use Blitz Charges to refresh heroes once they become disabled during a Blitz. You can get this coin from the daily challenges and you should always use it in order to make it further into a Blitz, especially during the beginning of the game. Raid Energy, Credit, Rebill Credit, Health Taxes, and Alliance Raid Tickets become available once you hit Captain Level 26 and can be used to acquire a few unique heroes as well as lots of useful tools. Although not all players agree that this is the best way to spend raid credits, one thing is for sure: you must have as much of this currency as you can possibly get. To do this, you need Raid Energy, which can be refreshed with both Power Cores and Raid Energy Refasset Credit from package purchases or special events. The further you go in a Raid, the greater your rewards, which is why Energy is so important. However, this is not the only resource you will need to successfully complete a Raid. In this game mode, the HP bars of your heroes do not refill between If one of your characters falls low on health or is defeated, you need health taxes to heal them back up or revive them. You can get more health taxes by doing their respective Challenge every day. Finally, Raid Tickets are made available to you once the Alliance reaches level 20. Gathered collectively by all members of the Alliance that complete sallies, these tickets can then be to unlock new instances and additional loot. That's it - all different types of currency you can and should use in Marvel Strike Force! Why would you bother to yourself off for all these resources, you might ask? Especially if you are an F2P player, this is the only way to access new heroes and upgrade existing ones. The end goal? A superior PvP team (link to Marvel Strike Force: The Best Teams for PvP Content) to go through all game modes. Download BlueStacks now
